

1 Supporting Online Materials

2

3 Spatially explicit global gross domestic product (GDP) data 4 set consistent with the Shared Socioeconomic Pathways

5

6 Tingting Wang, Fubao Sun*

7

8

9 Supporting figures

10

11 Figure S1 Comparison between national (a) and subnational (b) population between 12 official data against gridded data sets in 2005, values in the legend are their
13 corresponding RMSE.

14

15

Figure S2 Comparison between official GDP and disaggregated GDP at national level (a), at state and provincial (b), and at county (c) levels in U.S. and China in 2015, values in brackets are their corresponding RMSE.

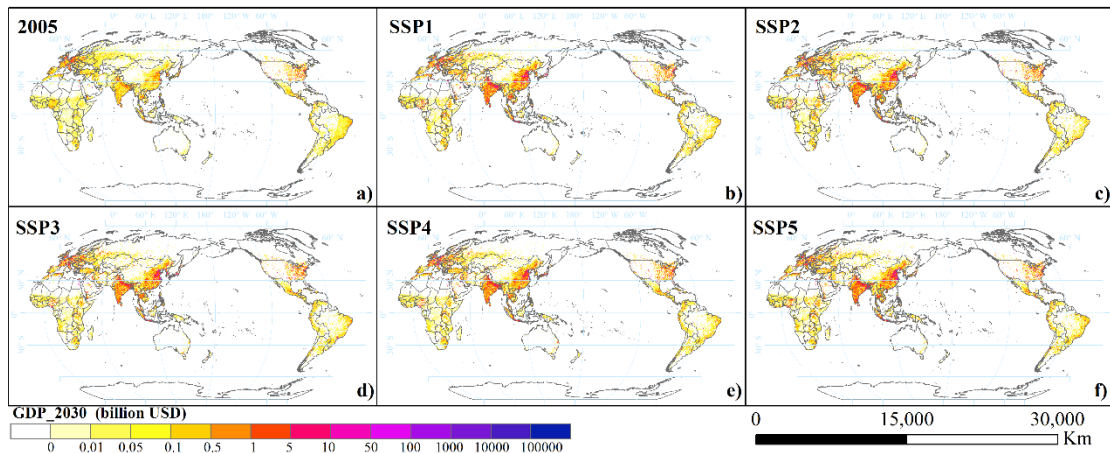

Figure S3 The spatial allocation of global GDP using GDP_{Pop} approach for 2005 (a) and 2030 under SSP1-5 scenarios (b-f) with a spatial resolution of 1 km.

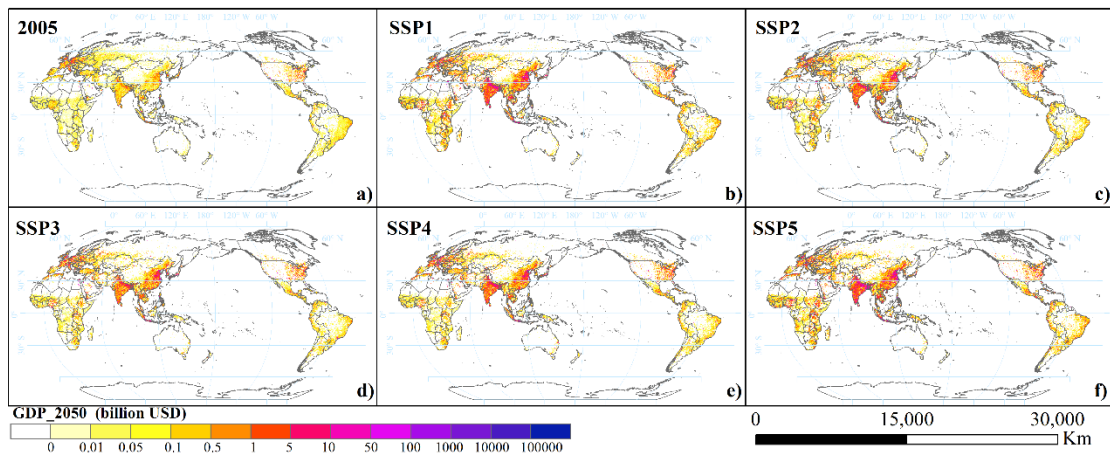

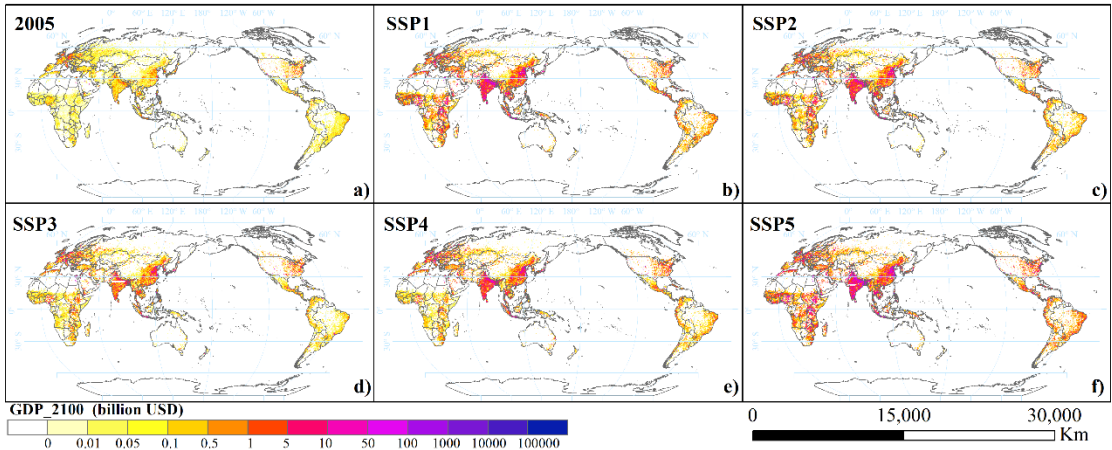

Figure S4 The spatial allocation of global GDP using GDP_{Pop} approach for 2005 (a) and 2050 under SSP1-5 scenarios (b-f) with a spatial resolution of 1 km.

30
31

32

33 Figure S5 The spatial allocation of global GDP using GDP_{Pop} approach for 2005 (a) and
34 2100 under SSP1-5 scenarios (b-f) with a spatial resolution of 1 km.